

TEMPORARY CLOSURE OF LONDON MUSIC VENUE KOKO
FOR STRUCTURAL REMEDIAL WORK

KOKO, the live music venue in London's Camden Town, has announced its temporary closure while structural remedial work is carried out.

The Grade II-listed venue closed on Friday 21 September and is expected to re-open in mid-October.

KOKO spokesman, Larry Seymour said "Our consultant surveyors recently made us aware of a structural issue with this 117-year-old building. The protection and well-being of our customers and staff is of paramount importance and we have therefore decided to close the venue while work is carried out."

All promoters and managements who had artistes or events booked into the venue during the closure period have been notified. "We place the utmost value on our relationships with our clients," Seymour says, "but we were unable to work around the diary. The nature of the work means that there is no alternative to a full closure.

"We offer sincere and heartfelt apologies to all our clients and customers who have been affected by the closure. Our contractors are working diligently and at all speed to ensure that we are able to welcome back a full programme of events as soon as possible."
